

Story Time- The Big Island Restaurant and Bakery

Tam and Matt lived two doors down from each other on Mulberry Street. Tam's house was to the left of Matt's house. The two children loved to play outside and go on adventures.

While Tam was blind, Matt was visually impaired. However, both Tam and Matt carried canes, so they travel by themselves.

One day Matt asked Tam a question. "Do you want to go to the new restaurant, "The Big Island"? He asked.

"Sure, Matt", Tam answered. "Let me go tell my mother and I will meet you in five minutes.

"Okay," Matt said and he waited.

The new restaurant was only two blocks north from their two houses. The two travelers knew their landmarks thanks to Ms. Hall, their orientation and mobility specialist.

"Look, the mailbox is over here," Tam stated and they walked further down the street.

"Tam, I just felt of the large Palm tree the restaurant planted," Matt said.

The two friends made their way inside of the restaurant.

"Aloha," the young waitress said. She was dressed in a hula skirt, and said her name was Yasmine.

"Aloha," Tam and Matt said back with giggles.

"Come and sit down and order," the waitress said.

Matt was not sure what to do. He forgot his magnifier at home and Tam was blind. Thankfully, Tam spoke up.

"Yasmine, do you have a large print menu for my friend and a Braille one for me?" she asked.

Yasmine was very nice. She said she had a large print menu but no Braille menu.

Yasmine said she would read the menu to Tam. Tam listened carefully while Matt looked over the large print menu.

Tam ordered a hamburger for 10.00. She added tea for 2.00.

Matt ordered seafood for 12.00. He added a soda for 3.50.

When Yasmine brought the food, Matt and Tam had a great time talking and eating.

Soon Yasmine brought the ticket for the two friends to pay.

A Visit to The Big Island Restaurant and Bakery

Tam and Matt liked The Big Island Restaurant very much, so the next week the two friends went back to The Big Island. This time they were going to visit the bakery.

Matt and Tam both used their canes and approached the counter. The bakery smelled like cake, cookies, cupcakes and brownies.

Tam ask for help. “Would you please tell me what you have to sell?”

The man behind the counter was very nice. His name was Bill.

Bill said, “Yes, I will. We have lemon cookies, chocolate brownies, vanilla cupcakes and peanut butter cookies.”

Matt asked the man how much money he would pay if he bought two cookies.

Bill asked, “One cookie is $2.00, so how much for two cookies?”

Tam and Matt laughed and both said, “$4.00.”
